Summary

The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2018 (BBA 2018, P.L. 115-123), enacted February 9, 2018, amended the statutory discretionary spending limits for FY2018 and FY2019. BBA 2018 comprised several other components as well, one of which was related to a congressional budget resolution for FY2019. These BBA 2018 “budget resolution” provisions (which may be referred to as a “deemer” or a budget resolution substitute) provide the House and Senate with enforceable levels of spending and revenue for FY2019 in ways that a “traditional” budget resolution would. While it is not unusual for Congress to employ such budget resolution substitutes, these substitutes differ from a “traditional” budget resolution in several ways.

The idea of a “traditional” budget resolution means a budget resolution as defined by the Congressional Budget Act, which specifies the way that a budget resolution shall be developed and considered and what components it must include. Budget resolution substitutes, such as the one in the BBA 2018, are not developed or considered in the manner specified by the Congressional Budget Act, nor do they include all of the components required by the act. Further, traditional budget resolutions often reflect a budget plan that differs from current law, while substitutes such as the BBA 2018 provisions set budgetary levels that are a reflection of baseline levels of spending and revenue that would occur if existing law were left unchanged. Additionally, traditional budget resolutions often include provisions triggering the budget reconciliation process; substitute provisions do not.

These provisions, however, do not preclude Congress from acting on a traditional budget resolution for FY2019. This means that Congress still has the option to consider a budget resolution for FY2019 even if it differs from the levels and components included in the BBA 2018 budget resolution provisions.

What Is a “Traditional” Budget Resolution?

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (hereinafter referred to as the Budget Act) establishes a requirement for Congress to adopt a budget resolution each year.¹ The budget resolution represents an agreement between the House and Senate on a budgetary plan for the upcoming fiscal year (and several out years). The budget resolution does not become law; therefore no money is spent or collected as a result of its adoption. Instead, the outline is designed to establish parameters within which Congress will consider subsequent budgetary legislation that will fulfill the budgetary plan.

Once the budget resolution has been agreed to by both chambers, certain levels contained in it are enforceable through points of order. This means that if subsequent legislation was being considered on the House or Senate floor that would violate certain levels established by the budget resolution, a Member could raise a point of order against the consideration of that legislation.² Generally, such points of order can be waived in the House by a simple majority of Members³ and in the Senate by three-fifths of all Senators.⁴

The idea of a “traditional” budget resolution means a budget resolution as defined by the Budget Act,⁵ which specifies the way that a budget resolution shall be developed and considered and what components it must include. Specifically, it states that House and Senate Budget Committees shall develop the budget resolution, and in doing this, the Committees must hold hearings and receive testimony from Members of Congress and “such appropriate representatives of Federal departments and agencies, the general public, and national organizations as the committee deems desirable.” Further, it states that the budget committees will receive input from their congressional colleagues in at least two ways: (1) through “consultation” with committees during the preparation of the budget resolution (the act applies only to the House Budget Committee) and 2) through the review of “Views and Estimates,” which are required to be submitted by committees to the Budget Committee and reflect information on the desired levels of spending and revenue within the relevant committee’s jurisdiction. The act also specifies how the budget resolution shall be considered by the House and Senate. For example, the Budget Act

² Points of order can be raised against bills, resolutions, amendments, or conference reports. If such a point of order is raised against legislation for violating levels in the budget resolution, the presiding officer makes a ruling on the point of order based on estimates provided by the relevant budget committee (Budget Act, §312). Points of order are not self-enforcing, meaning that if no Member raises a point of order, a chamber may consider and pass legislation that would violate levels established in the budget resolution. In addition, either chamber may waive the point of order.

³ In the House, most measures are considered in one of two ways, both of which routinely waive points of order. First, a measure may be considered under terms specified in a resolution (referred to as a special rule) reported from the House Rules Committee. Such resolutions often include language waiving points of order against the underlying legislation as well as certain specified amendments. A special rule requires for adoption a simple majority of those voting, assuming a quorum is present. The second common way that measures are considered in the House is under the suspension of the rules procedure. When measures are considered under this procedure, such points of order are automatically waived. Measures considered under this procedure require for passage a two-thirds vote of those voting, assuming a quorum is present.

⁴ In the Senate, such points of order can be waived with the support of three-fifths of Senators duly chosen and sworn. In such a situation, a Senator may make a motion to waive the point of order either after one has been raised or before it has been raised (in anticipation of the point of order). The waiver motion may apply to one or more points of order, as specified by the Senator making the motion.

⁵ Specifically, Sections 301, 302, and 305.

specifies that the budget resolution be debated for up to 50 hours in the Senate, with amendments permitted, and not subject to filibuster.

Required Components of a Budget Resolution

The Budget Act requires that the budget resolution include the budgetary levels noted below either in the text of the budget resolution or in the accompanying report. It should be noted that while the Budget Act requires the inclusion of all of these levels, not all of these levels are enforceable by points of order. Some levels in the budget resolution are, therefore, included only for informational purposes. Provisions below that are enforceable are marked with an asterisk.

- total spending for the upcoming fiscal year and at least four out years*;
- total revenues for the upcoming fiscal year and at least four out years*;
- the amount, if any, by which the aggregate level of revenues should be increased or decreased by legislation for the upcoming fiscal year and at least four out years;
- the surplus/deficit for the upcoming fiscal year and at least four out years;
- new spending for each major functional category for the upcoming fiscal year and at least four out years;
- the public debt for the upcoming fiscal year and at least four out years;
- (in the Senate only) Social Security spending and revenue levels*; and
- amounts of spending allocated among committees*.⁶

Commonly Included Optional Components of a Budget Resolutions

It is common for the budget resolution to include other optional components such as those listed below.⁷

- Provisions triggering the reconciliation process. If Congress intends to use the reconciliation process, it must include reconciliation directives (also referred to as reconciliation instructions) in the budget resolution. These directives instruct individual committees to develop and report legislation that would change laws within their respective jurisdictions related to direct spending, revenue, or the debt limit. Such reconciliation legislation is then eligible to be considered under special expedited procedures in both the House and Senate.⁸

⁶ The Budget Act provides that the House and Senate Appropriations Committees receive an allocation for only the upcoming fiscal year (referred to as the budget year), but the remaining House and Senate committees receive allocations for the entire period covered by the budget resolution. These committee spending allocations are required to be included in the joint explanatory statement accompanying the conference report on the budget resolution. The report accompanying the budget resolution is also required to include other components (Budget Act, §301(e)(2)). The Budget Act requires that the House and Senate Appropriations Committees subdivide their allocations by subcommittee and report these sub-allocations to their respective chambers. These are referred to as 302(b) sub-allocations.

⁷ Some of these provisions are included in budget resolutions under the authority given to Congress by Section 301(b)(4) of the Budget Act, sometimes referred to as the “elastic clause.” It states that Congress may “set forth such other matters, and require such other procedures, relating to the budget, as may be appropriate to carry out the purposes of” the Budget Act.

- Procedural provisions. A budget resolution typically includes procedural provisions such as House and Senate budgetary rules (enforced by points of order) and direction on the budgetary treatment of certain activities (such as energy savings contracts).
- Reserve funds and adjustments. Congress frequently includes “reserve funds” and “adjustments” in the annual budget resolution. These provisions provide the chairs of the House or Senate Budget Committees with the authority to adjust the budgetary allocations, aggregates, and levels in the future if certain conditions are met. Generally, the goal of reserve funds or adjustment is to allow certain policies to be considered on the floor without triggering a point of order for violating levels in the budget resolution.
- Policy statements. The budget resolution sometimes includes policy provisions that typically apply only to the House. These statements express the underlying assumptions, preferences, or priorities of the budget resolution but are not binding.

What Did the Bipartisan Budget Act of 2018 Budget Resolution Provisions Include?

The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2018 (BBA 2018, P.L. 115-123), enacted February 9, 2018, amended the statutory discretionary spending limits for FY2018 and FY2019. BBA 2018 comprised several other components as well, one of which was related to a congressional budget resolution for FY2019.

The budget resolution provisions included in the BBA 2018 require the House and Senate Budget Committee chairs to each file a statement of budgetary levels, which would have effect in the respective chamber as if they had been included in a budget resolution.⁹ These levels are required to be filed for publication in the Congressional Record between April 15, 2018, and May 15, 2018.¹⁰

The Budget Committee chairs are not given discretion to file any budgetary levels they wish. Instead, the BBA 2018 requires that (1) for discretionary spending, the filed levels be consistent with the statutory limits on discretionary spending (that were amended by the BBA 2018)¹¹ and (2) for mandatory spending and revenue levels, the filed levels be consistent with the most recent baseline of the Congressional Budget Office (CBO), which was released on April 9, 2018.¹² The baseline is a projection of federal spending and revenue that would occur if existing law were left unchanged.¹³

⁹ Sections 30103 (Senate) and 30104 (House).

¹¹ For FY2019, the statutory limit on defense discretionary spending is $647 billion, and the statutory limit on nondefense discretionary spending is $597 billion. The BBA provisions also give the Budget Committee chairs the option of including in the filing some specified provisions of the FY2018 budget resolution (H.Con.Res. 71 [115th Congress]), which was agreed to by Congress in October 2017. The Senate-related section in the BBA 2018 states that when the Senate Budget Committee chair files the required levels, the filing may also include for FY2019 the deficit-neutral reserve funds contained in the FY2018 budget resolution.¹⁴ See Appendix B for a full listing of these provisions. Likewise, the House-related section in the BBA 2018 states that when the House Budget Committee chair files the required levels, the filing may also include for FY2019 specified provisions contained in the FY2018 budget resolution, which include adjustments as well as procedural provisions.¹⁵ See Appendix C for a full listing of these provisions.

The existence of the BBA 2018 provisions, however, does not preclude Congress from acting on a traditional budget resolution for FY2019, so Congress still has the option to consider a budget resolution that differs from the levels and components included in the BBA 2018 budget resolution provisions. In fact, the BBA 2018 specifies that the budget resolution sections shall expire if a concurrent resolution on the budget for FY2019 is agreed to by both the Senate and the House.

Below, Table 1 and Table 2 compare the components of the budget resolution provisions included in the BBA 2018 with the common components of a traditional budget resolution. As described above, the Budget Act requires Congress to include certain components in a budget resolution while also giving Congress the option of including other types of material.¹⁶ Again, not all of these levels are enforceable through points of order.

¹⁴ The law specifies that these reserve funds be updated by one year to reflect the current budget window. There are more than two dozen Senate-related deficit-neutral reserve funds included in H.Con.Res. 71 that pertain to subjects such as the farm bill, the Federal Aviation Administration, wildfire prevention and control, disaster relief, Medicare, and Medicaid.

¹⁵ There are 19 such provisions referenced that include points of order against legislation that would increase long-term direct spending, a point of order against discretionary appropriations legislation that include more than a specified amount of changes to mandatory spending, requirements for CBO and the Joint Committee on Taxation, scoring rules related to federal reserve surpluses, guarantee fees of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, and a reserve fund for investment in national infrastructure.

See Appendix C for those provisions included in H.Con.Res. 71.

Are the Budget Resolution Provisions Included in the BBA 2018 Uncommon?

In the absence of agreement on a budget resolution, Congress will often employ alternative legislative tools to serve as a substitute for a budget resolution. These substitutes are typically referred to as “deeming resolutions,” because they are deemed to serve in place of a budget resolution for the purposes of establishing enforceable budget levels for the upcoming fiscal year. Such mechanisms are not formally defined and have no specifically prescribed content. Instead, they simply represent the House and Senate, sometimes separately, using some alternative legislative procedures to deal with enforcement issues. Deeming resolutions can vary significantly in content and timing.¹⁷

Congress has included budget resolution provisions like the ones in the BBA 2018 in prior legislation related to the statutory discretionary spending limits. In each case noted below, the levels required to be filed were baseline levels of spending and revenue that would occur if existing law were left unchanged.

- The Budget Control Act of 2011 (P.L. 112-25), which re-established statutory limits on discretionary spending, included a section requiring the Senate Budget

¹⁷ For more information on deeming resolutions, see CRS Report R44296, Deeming Resolutions: Budget Enforcement in the Absence of a Budget Resolution, by Megan S. Lynch.

- Committee chair to file enforceable budgetary levels for FY2012 and for FY2013 in the absence of a traditional budget resolution in the Senate.¹⁸
- The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2013 (often referred to as the Murray-Ryan Agreement, P.L. 113-67), which increased discretionary spending limits for both defense and nondefense for FY2014 and FY2015, included sections designed to serve as substitutes for a traditional congressional budget resolution in both the House and Senate for each FY2014 and FY2015.¹⁹
 - The Bipartisan Budget Act of 2015 (P.L. 114-74), which increased discretionary spending limits for both defense and nondefense for FY2016 and FY2017, included a section requiring the Senate Budget Committee chair to file enforceable budgetary levels for FY2017 in the absence of a traditional budget resolution in the Senate.²⁰

¹⁸ Section 106.

¹⁹ Section 111 provides for both the House and Senate for FY2014. Sections 115 and 116 provide separately for the House and Senate for FY2015, respectively.
