Congressional Research Service
Informing the legislative debate since 1914

Membership of the 117th Congress: A Profile

Updated August 31, 2022

Congressional Research Service
https://crsreports.congress.gov
R46705

CRS REPORT
Prepared for Members and Committees of Congress

The House of Representatives and Senate Explained

Congressional Procedure

A Practical Guide to the Legislative Process in the U.S. Congress

Richard A. Arenberg

Foreword by Alan S. Frumin

TheCapitol.Net

Congressional Research Service
Informing the legislative debate since 1914

Membership of the 117th Congress: A Profile

SUMMARY

This report presents a profile of the membership of the 117th Congress (2021-2022) as of August 31, 2022, or at the beginning of the 117th Congress (January 3, 2021), where noted. Statistical information is included on selected characteristics of Members, including data on party affiliation, average age, occupation, education, length of congressional service, religious affiliation, gender, ethnicity, foreign birth, and military service.

R46705

August 31, 2022

Jennifer E. Manning
Senior Research Librarian

In the House of Representatives, there are 223 Democrats (including 4 Delegates), 213 Republicans (including 1 Delegate and the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico), and 5 vacant seats. The Senate has 50 Republicans, 48 Democrats, and 2 Independents, who both caucus with the Democrats. Additionally,

- The average age of Members of the House at the beginning of the 117th Congress was 58.4 years; of Senators, 64.3 years.
- The overwhelming majority, 96%, of Members of Congress have a college education.
- The dominant professions of Members are public service/politics, business, and law.
- Most Members identify as Christians, and the collective majority of these affiliate with a Protestant denomination. Roman Catholics account for the largest single religious denomination, and numerous other affiliations are represented, including Jewish, Mormon, Buddhist, Muslim, Hindu, Greek Orthodox, Pentecostal Christian, Unitarian Universalist, and Adventist.
- The average length of service for Representatives at the beginning of the 117th Congress was 8.9 years (4.5 House terms); for Senators, 11.0 years (1.8 Senate terms).
- One hundred fifty women serve in the 117th Congress: 126 in the House, including 3 Delegates and the Resident Commissioner, and 24 in the Senate.
- There are 58 African American Members of the House and 3 in the Senate. This House number includes two Delegates.
- There are 52 Hispanic or Latino Members serving: 46 in the House, including 2 Delegates and the Resident Commissioner, and 7 in the Senate.
- There are 21 Members (16 Representatives, 3 Delegates, and 2 Senators) who are Asian Americans or Pacific Islander Americans.
- A record five Native Americans (American Indians or Native Hawaiians) serve in the House.

The portions of this report covering political party affiliation, gender, ethnicity, and vacant seats may be updated as events warrant. The remainder of the report will not be updated.

Contents

Overview and Total Members in History 1
Party Breakdown 1
Age 2
Occupations 2
Education 5
Congressional Service 6
Religion 6
Gender and Ethnicity 7
- Women Members 7
- African American Members 7
- Hispanic/Latino American Members 8
- Asian/Pacific Islander American Members 8
- American Indian Members 9
- Foreign Birth 9
- Military Service 9

Tables

Table 1. Average Age of Members, 114th-117th Congresses 2
Table 2. Most Frequently Listed Occupational Categories by Members, 117th Congress 3
Table 3. Average Length of Service for Members of Congress, 113th-117th Congresses 6

Contacts

Author Information 10

Overview and Total Members in History

Congress is composed of 541 individuals[1] from the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, the U.S. Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and Puerto Rico. Since 1789, 12,426 individuals[2] have served as either Representatives (11,112 individuals) or Senators (1,994 individuals).[3] Of these individuals, 680 have served in both chambers. An additional 178 individuals have served in the House in the roles of territorial Delegates or Resident Commissioners.[4]

The following is a profile of the 117th Congress (2021-2022).[5]

Party Breakdown

In the 117th Congress, the current party alignments as of August 31, 2022,[6] are as follows:

- House of Representatives: 223 Democrats (including 4 Delegates), 212 Republicans (including 1 Delegate and the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico), and 5 vacant seats.
- Senate: 50 Republicans, 48 Democrats, and 2 Independents, who both caucus with the Democrats.

[1] This 541 number is the maximum number of individuals who may currently serve in the House and Senate and assumes that no seat is temporarily vacant. As of August 31, 2022, there are five House vacancies. The 541 number includes the 535 Members from the 50 states (100 Senators, 435 Representatives), 5 Members who are Delegates (from the District of Columbia, Guam, American Samoa, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Northern Mariana Islands), and 1 Member who is Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico. References in this report to "Representative(s)" include the 435 Members of the House from the 50 states and exclude the Members who are Delegates and the Resident Commissioner. Percentages in this report assume a full Congress of 541 Members.

For more information on the status of the Delegates and Resident Commissioner, refer to CRS Report R40170, Parliamentary Rights of the Delegates and Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico, by Christopher M. Davis.

[2] U.S. Congress, House, Office of the Historian, "Total Members of the House and State Representation," at http://history.house.gov/Institution/Total-Members/Total-Members/, updated January 21, 2021, and CRS calculations.

Information about all the Members who have served in Congress is available in the Biographical Directory of the United States Congress, a website maintained by the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate at http://bioguide.congress.gov.

[3] A cumulative, chronological list of all U.S. Senators is available on the Senate website at http://www.senate.gov/artandhistory/history/common/briefing/senators_chronological.htm. Information about all House Members is available on the House website at http://history.house.gov/Institution/Total-Members/Total-Members/.

[4] The Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico serves a four-year term, unlike other House members who serve two-year terms. The Philippines was represented in the House by Resident Commissioners from 1907 until 1946, when it became an independent nation. For more information, see CRS Report R40555, Delegates to the U.S. Congress: History and Current Status, by Christopher M. Davis.

[5] For background information on the previous Congress, refer to CRS Report R45583, Membership of the 116th Congress: A Profile, by Jennifer E. Manning.

[6] The 117th Congress began on January 3, 2021, with the following party alignments: House of Representatives: 226 Democrats (including 4 Delegates), 213 Republicans (including 1 Delegate and the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico), and 2 vacant seats; Senate: 51 Republicans, 46 Democrats, 2 Independents, who both caucus with the Democrats, and 1 vacant seat.

Age

The average age at the beginning of the 117th Congress was 58.4 years for Representatives and 64.3 years for Senators.[7]

Table 1 shows the average ages at the beginning of the 117th and three previous Congresses.

Table 1. Average Age of Members, 114th-117th Congresses

Average (mean) age at the beginning of the Congress

Congress	Representatives	Newly Elected Representatives	Senators	Newly Elected Senators
117th	58.4 years	50.6 years	64.3 years	56.1 years
116th	57.6 years	47.9 years	62.9 years	58.1 years
115th	57.8 years	50.8 years	61.8 years	54.8 years
114th	57.0 years	52.3 years	61.0 years	50.7 years

Source: CRS calculations based on CQ, "117th Congress: Birthdays," https://plus.cq.com/members/factfile/birthdays.

Notes: Representatives' age data do not include the Delegates and the Resident Commissioner. Newly elected Members' data do not include those returning to the House or Senate for a second time.

The U.S. Constitution requires Representatives to be at least 25 years old when they take office.[8] The youngest Representative in the 117th Congress, and the youngest House Member since 1965,[9] is Madison Cawthorn (R-NC), born August 1, 1995, who was 25 at the beginning of the 117th Congress. The current oldest Representative is Hal Rogers (R-KY), born December 31, 1937, who was 83.[10]

Senators must be at least 30 years old when they take office. The youngest Senator in the 117th Congress is Jon Ossoff (D-GA), born February 16, 1987, who was 33 at the beginning of the Congress. The oldest Senator in the 117th Congress is Dianne Feinstein (D-CA), born June 22, 1933, who was 87.

Occupations

According to data on occupations provided by CQ.com, in the 117th Congress, public service/politics is the most commonly declared profession of Senators, followed by law, then business; for Representatives, public service/politics is first, closely followed by business, then law.[11]

[7] For more information about age distributions in the 117th Congress, see Pew Research Center, "Boomers, Silents still have most seats in Congress, though number of Millennials, Gen Xers is up slightly," February 12, 2021, at https://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2021/02/12/boomers-silents-still-have-most-seats-in-congress-though-number-of-millennials-gen-xers-is-up-slightly/.

[8] Article I, Section 2, clause 2, of the U.S. Constitution.

[9] Rep. Jed Johnson Jr. (D-OK) was sworn into the 89th Congress (1965-66) 7 days after he turned 25.

[10] The former oldest Representative in the 117th Congress, Rep. Don Young (R-AK), passed away on March 18, 2022, at the age of 87.

[11] These data do not include the Delegates and Resident Commissioner.

For more summary information on the occupational backgrounds of Members of Congress, 1953-present, see the "Prior Occupations" tables in Chapter 1, "Demographics of members of Congress" in Vital Statistics on Congress at

Table 2 uses summary data from CQ.com to present the occupational categories most frequently listed as prior careers of Members of the 117th Congress.

Table 2. Most Frequently Listed Occupational Categories by Members, 117th Congress

At the beginning of the 117th Congress

Occupation	Representatives	Senators
Public Service/Politics	297	64
Business	273	47
Law	173	57
Education	85	28

Sources: CQ.com and the CQ Member Profiles.

Note: Most Members list more than one profession when surveyed by CQ Roll Call, and the professions listed are not necessarily the ones Members practiced immediately prior to entering Congress.

A closer look at the range of prior occupations and previously held public offices of Members of the House and Senate at the beginning of the 117th Congress, as listed in their CQ Member Profiles,[12] also shows the following:

- 47 Senators with previous House service;
- 113 Members who have worked in education, including teachers, professors, instructors, school fundraisers, counselors, administrators, or coaches (85 in the House, including 2 Delegates, 28 in the Senate);
- 4 physicians in the Senate, 14 physicians in the House, plus 5 dentists and 1 veterinarian;[13]
- 2 psychologists (in the House), an optometrist (in the Senate), 2 pharmacists (in the House), and 3 nurses and 1 physician assistant (in the House);
- 7 ordained ministers (5 in the House, 2 in the Senate);
- 38 former mayors (31 in the House, 7 in the Senate);
- 13 former state governors (12 in the Senate, 1 in the House) and 10 lieutenant governors (5 in the Senate, 5 in the House);
- 7 attorneys general of their states (6 in the Senate, 1 in the House) and 8 secretaries of state (3 in the Senate, 5 in the House);

https://www.brookings.edu/multi-chapter-report/vital-statistics-on-congress/, a joint project of the American Enterprise Institute and Brookings Institution.

Please note that the data in these third-party resources are unlikely to be updated after publication.

[12] CQ Member Profiles are available on the CQ.com subscription database at http://www.cq.com/members/home.do. The CQ.com database is available in all House and Senate offices, as well as some academic libraries. The profiles are also available in print form in the CQ publication Politics in America. The professions listed here are not exhaustive and are not necessarily the ones practiced by Members immediately prior to entering Congress. Most Members list more than one profession in their CQ Member Profiles.

[13] One of the medical doctors in the Senate is an ophthalmologist. For more information on medical professionals serving in the House, see the Library of the House of Representatives' "Member Demographics" web page at https://clerk.house.gov/Members#Demographics. For Senators, see the Senate Historical Office's "Physicians in the Senate" web page at https://www.senate.gov/senators/PhysiciansintheSenate.htm.

- 16 former judges (all but 1 in the House) and 38 prosecutors (9 in the Senate, 29 in the House) who have served in city, county, state, federal, or military capacities;
- 4 Ambassadors (two in each chamber);[14]
- 238 former state or territorial legislators (45 in the Senate, 193 in the House, including 2 Delegates and the Resident Commissioner from Puerto Rico);[15]
- at least 78 former congressional staffers (15 in the Senate, 63 in the House, including 3 Delegates), as well as 5 former congressional pages (2 in the House and 3 in the Senate);[16]
- 2 sheriffs, 1 police chief and 3 other police officers, 1 fire chief, 1 firefighter, 2 CIA employees, and 1 FBI agent (all in the House);
- 1 Peace Corps volunteer in the House;
- 1 physicist and 1 chemist, both in the House, and 1 geologist in the Senate;
- 9 engineers (8 in the House and 1 in the Senate);
- 21 public relations or communications professionals (3 in the Senate, 18 in the House), and 7 accountants (1 in the Senate and 6 in the House);
- 6 software company executives in the House and 2 in the Senate;
- 38 consultants[17] (7 in the Senate, 31 in the House), 5 car dealership owners (all in the House), and 4 venture capitalists (2 in the House, 2 in the Senate);
- 16 bankers or bank executives (4 in the Senate, 12 in the House), 27 veterans of the real estate industry (3 in the Senate, 24 in the House), and 8 Members who have worked in the construction industry (1 in the Senate, 7 in the House);
- 7 social workers (2 in the Senate, 5 in the House) and 3 union representatives (all in the House);
- 16 nonprofit executives or founders (15 in the House, 1 in the Senate);
- 2 radio talk show hosts (both in the House); 4 radio or television broadcasters, managers, or owners (3 in the House, 1 in the Senate); 7 reporters or journalists (1 in the Senate, 6 in the House); and 3 newspaper publishers in the House;
- 18 insurance agents or executives (3 in the Senate, 15 in the House) and 7 Members who have worked in the securities industry (all in the House);
- 1 artist, 1 book publisher, and 2 speechwriters (all in the House), and 2 documentary filmmakers in the Senate;
- 6 restaurateurs (5 in the House, 1 in the Senate), as well as 2 coffee shop and 1 wine store owners (all in the House), and 1 brewpub owner in the Senate;
- 27 farmers, ranchers, or cattle farm owners (6 in the Senate, 21 in the House);

[14] In addition, one Senator previously served as the U.S. Trade Representative, a position carrying the rank and title of Ambassador.

[15] National Conference of State Legislators, "Former State Legislators in the 117th Congress" (as of December 30, 2020), at https://www.ncsl.org/ncsl-in-dc/publications-and-resources/former-state-legislators-in-congress.aspx.

[16] Michael L. Koempel and Judy Schneider, Congressional Deskbook, 6th ed. (Washington: TheCapitol.Net, 2012), Figure 5.22, supplemented by data from CQ Member Profiles and House and Senate payroll documents.

[17] The job titles for these consultants in their CQ Member Profiles include "management consultant," "ethics consultant," and "nonprofit consultant."

Pocket Constitution

The Declaration of Independence
The Constitution of the United States
The Bill of Rights
Amendments XI–XXVII
Gettysburg Address

TheCapitolNet
TCNFPC.com

- 1 almond orchard owner and vintner, as well as a forester and a fruit orchard worker (all in the House);
- 1 flight attendant and 4 pilots, all in the House, and 1 astronaut in the Senate;
- 3 professional football players, 1 hockey player, 1 baseball player, and 1 mixed martial arts fighter (all in the House); and
- 7 current members of the military reserves (6 in the House, 1 in the Senate) and 7 current members of the National Guard (all in the House).

Other occupations listed in the CQ Member Profiles include emergency dispatcher, letter carrier, animal nutrition specialist, waiter, electrician, rodeo announcer, carpenter, video game developer, computer systems analyst, software engineer, R&D lab executive, and explosives expert.

Education

As has been true in recent Congresses, the vast majority of Members (93.8% of House Members and 100% of Senators) at the beginning of the 117th Congress have earned at least a bachelor's degree. Sixty-seven percent of House Members and 76% of Senators hold educational degrees beyond a bachelor's.[18] The CQ Member Profiles at the beginning of the 117th Congress indicate the following:

- 22 Members of the House have no educational degree beyond a high school diploma or GED;
- 5 Members of the House have associate's degrees as their highest degrees;
- 108 Members of the House and 18 Senators earned a master's degree as their highest attained degrees;
- 144 Members of the House (32.7% of the House) and 50 Senators (50% of the Senate) hold law degrees;
- 22 Representatives and 4 Senators have doctoral (Ph.D., D.Phil., Ed.D., or D. Min) degrees;[19] and
- 20 Members of the House and 5 Senators have medical degrees.[20]

By comparison, 35 years ago in the 100th Congress (1987-1988), 85.5% of House Members and 89% of Senators held bachelor's degrees. Forty-five years ago, in the 95th Congress (1977-1978), 82.7% of House Members and 87% of Senators held bachelor's degrees. Sixty years ago, in the 87th Congress (1961-1962), 76% of House Members and 76% of Senators held bachelor's degrees.[21]

Three Representatives and one Senator are graduates of the U.S. Military Academy, five Representatives and one Senator graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, one Representative graduated from the U.S. Air Force Academy, and one Senator graduated from the U.S. Merchant [18] CQ, "117th Congress: Education," at https://plus.cq.com/members/factfile/education.

[19] An additional House Member with a doctoral degree was sworn in in April 2021.

[20] Four Senators and 14 Representatives have M.D. degrees, 1 Senator has an O.D. (doctor of optometry) degree, 5 Representatives have D.D.S. (doctor of dental surgery) degrees, and 1 Representative has a D.V.M. (doctor of veterinary medicine) degree.

[21] CRS Report R42365, Representatives and Senators: Trends in Member Characteristics Since 1945, coordinated by R. Eric Petersen.

Marine Academy. Five Representatives and one Senator were Rhodes Scholars, two Representatives were Fulbright Scholars, two Representatives were Marshall Scholars, and two Representatives and one Senator were Truman Scholars.[22]

Congressional Service

The average length of service for Representatives at the beginning of the 117th Congress was 8.9 years (4.5 House terms); for Senators, 11.0 years (1.8 Senate terms).

Table 3. Average Length of Service for Members of Congress, 113th-117th Congresses

Average (mean) at the beginning of the Congress, in years and numbers of terms

Congress	Representatives	Senators
117th	8.9 years (4.5 terms)	11.0 years (1.8 terms)
116th	8.6 years (4.3 terms)	10.1 years (1.7 terms)
115th	9.4 years (4.6 terms)	10.1 years (1.7 terms)
114th	8.8 years (4.4 terms)	9.7 years (1.6 terms)
113th	9.1 years (4.6 terms)	10.2 years (1.7 terms)

Source: CRS Report R41545, Congressional Careers: Service Tenure and Patterns of Member Service, 1789-2021, by Sarah J. Eckman and Amber Hope Wilhelm.

Notes: Representatives are elected for two-year terms. Senators are elected for six-year terms. Note that 47 Senators in the 117th Congress have previously served in the House. Their House service is not included in this average, nor is the House service of Senators included in previous Congresses.

At the beginning of the 117th Congress, 57 of the House Members (12.9% of the total House membership) had first been elected to the House in November 2020, and 9 of the Senators (9% of the total Senate membership) had first been elected to the Senate in November 2020.[23] At the beginning of the 116th Congress, 20.4% of the House and 9% of the Senate were newly elected "freshmen."

At the beginning of the 117th Congress, 131 House Members (29.7% of House Members) had no more than 2 years of House experience, and 18 Senators (18% of Senators) had no more than 2 years of Senate experience.

For more historical information on the tenure of Members of Congress, see CRS Report R41545, Congressional Careers: Service Tenure and Patterns of Member Service, 1789-2021, by Sarah J. Eckman and Amber Hope Wilhelm.

Religion

Ninety-seven percent of the Members of the 117th Congress report an affiliation with a specific religion.[24]

[22] Rhodes and Marshall scholarships fund study at British universities; Fulbright scholarships fund international exchange programs; Truman scholarships fund graduate study toward public service. One of the House Rhodes Scholars counted here resigned in May 2022.

[23] In addition, one Senator was appointed to and sworn into the Senate in January 2021, after the 117th Congress began.

[24] Nineteen Members of the 117th Congress do not specify a religious affiliation, or report themselves as unaffiliated.

Statistics gathered by the Pew Research Center on Religion and Public Life, which studies the religious affiliation of Representatives and Senators, and CQ at the beginning of the 117th Congress showed the following:

- 55.4% of Members (236 in the House, 58 in the Senate) are Protestant, with Baptist as the most represented denomination, followed by Methodist;
- 29.8% of Members (134 in the House, 24 in the Senate) are Catholic;
- 6.3% of Members (25 in the House, 9 in the Senate) are Jewish;
- 1.7% of Members (6 in the House, 3 in the Senate) are Mormon (Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints);
- 2 Members (1 in the House, 1 in the Senate) are Buddhist, 3 Representatives are Muslim, and 2 Representatives are Hindu; and
- other religious affiliations represented include Greek Orthodox, Pentecostal Christian, Unitarian Universalist, and Adventist.[25]

Gender and Ethnicity

Women Members

One hundred fifty women Members (27.7% of the total membership) serve in the 117th Congress, 19 more than at the beginning of the 116th Congress.[26] One hundred twenty-six women, including 3 Delegates as well as the Resident Commissioner, serve in the House and 24 in the Senate. Of the 126 women in the House, 92 are Democrats, including 2 of the Delegates, and 34 are Republicans, including 1 Delegate as well as the Resident Commissioner. Of the 24 women in the Senate, 16 are Democrats and 8 are Republicans.[27]

By comparison, approximately 35 years ago in the 100th Congress (1987-1988), 24 women served in the House, and 2 in the Senate. Approximately 45 years ago, in the 95th Congress (1977-1978), there were 18 women in the House, and 3 in the Senate.

African American Members

There are a record 61 African American Members (11.3% of the total membership) in the 117th Congress, 4 more than at the beginning of the 116th Congress.[28] Fifty-eight serve in the House,

---

Pew Research Center on Religion and Public Life Project, "Faith on the Hill: The Religious Composition of the 117th Congress," January 4, 2021, at https://www.pewforum.org/2021/01/04/faith-on-the-hill-2021/.

[25] Detailed religious affiliation information for Members of the 117th Congress, and comparisons to the U.S. general population, are available at https://www.pewforum.org/2021/01/04/faith-on-the-hill-2021/.

[26] The 117th Congress began with 148 women Members; one woman House Member was sworn in in February 2021, one woman Senator resigned in January 2021 to become Vice President, and another woman Senator's temporary term ended in January 2021. In March 2021, two women House Members resigned to join the President's Cabinet, and an additional woman House Member was sworn in in April 2021, followed by another in June 2021, another in November 2021, another in January 2022, and two more in June 2022. One woman House Member died in August 2022.

[27] For more information, see CRS Report RL30261, Women in Congress, 1917-2022: Service Dates and Committee Assignments by Member, and Lists by State and Congress, by Jennifer E. Manning and Ida A. Brudnick, and the Office of the House Historian's Women in Congress website at http://history.house.gov/Exhibition-and-Publications/WIC/Women-in-Congress/.

[28] The 117th Congress began with 62 African American Members. In January 2021, after the 117th Congress began, one including two Delegates, and three serve in the Senate. This number includes two Representatives who are of African American and Asian ancestry, and one Representative who is of African American and Hispanic ancestry. In this report, each of these three Members is counted as belonging to two ethnic groups. Fifty-six of the African American House Members, including two Delegates, are Democrats, and two are Republicans. Two of the Senators are Democrats and one is Republican. Twenty-eight African American women, including two Delegates, serve in Congress, all in the House.[29]

By comparison, approximately 35 years ago in the 99th Congress (1985-1986), 21 African American Members served in the House, and none in the Senate. Sixty years ago, in the 87th Congress (1961-1962), there were 4 African American Members of Congress, all serving in the House.

Hispanic/Latino American Members

There are 52 Hispanic or Latino Members in the 117th Congress, 9.6% of the total membership and a record number.[30] Forty-five serve in the House, including two Delegates and the Resident Commissioner, and seven in the Senate. These numbers include two House Members who are also of Asian descent, and one House Member also of African ancestry; these Members are counted in both ethnic categories in this report. Of the Members of the House, 32 are Democrats (including 2 Delegates) and 13 are Republicans (including the Resident Commissioner). Sixteen are women, including the Resident Commissioner. Of the seven Hispanic Senators (three Republicans, four Democrats), one is a woman. By comparison, approximately 35 years ago in the 99th Congress (1985-1986), 14 Hispanic or Latino Members served in Congress. All 14 were male Members of the House.

Asian/Pacific Islander American Members

Twenty-one Members of the 117th Congress (3.9% of the total membership) are of Asian, South Asian, or Pacific Islander ancestry.[31] Nineteen of them (16 Democrats, 3 Republicans) serve in African American House Member resigned to become Senior Advisor and Director of Public Engagement in the Biden Administration, one Senator resigned to become Vice President, and another Senator was sworn in. In March 2021, one African American House Member resigned to become Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, and in May 2022, another resigned to become lieutenant governor of New York. One African American House Member died in April 2021, another was sworn in in May 2021, another in November 2021, and another in January 2022.

For more information, see the Office of the House Historian's Black Americans in Congress website at https://history.house.gov/baic/.

[29] For more information, see CRS Report RL30378, African American Members of the U.S. Congress: 1870-2020, by Ida A. Brudnick and Jennifer E. Manning, and the Office of the House Historian's Black Americans in Congress website at https://history.house.gov/baic/. Due to differences in data collection or characterization, demographic data in other studies on Members of Congress may differ from those presented in this report.

[30] This number includes three House Members and one Senator who are of Portuguese ancestry and belong, or have belonged, to the Congressional Hispanic Caucus or the Congressional Hispanic Conference. One House Member of Portuguese ancestry resigned in January 2022, another Hispanic House Member resigned in March 2022, and another resigned in May 2022; one Hispanic House Member was sworn in in June 2022. For more information, see the Office of the House Historian's Hispanic Americans in Congress website at http://history.house.gov/Exhibitions-and-Publications/HAIC/Hispanic-Americans-in-Congress/. Due to differences in data collection or characterization, demographic data in other studies on Members of Congress may differ from those presented in this report.

[31] The 117th Congress began with a record 22 Asian/Pacific Islander American Members; one Senator resigned in January 2021 to become Vice President of the United States.

For more information, see the Office of the House Historian's Asian and Pacific Islander Americans in Congress

the House, and 2 (both Democrats) serve in the Senate. These numbers include two House Members who are also of African American ancestry, two House Members also of Hispanic ancestry, and one Member who is also Native Hawaiian (Native American); these Members are counted in both ethnic categories in this report. Of those serving in the House, three are Delegates. Eleven of the Asian, Pacific Islander, or South Asian American Members are female: nine in the House, and two in the Senate. By comparison, approximately 35 years ago in the 99th Congress (1985-1986), there were 5 Asian/Pacific Islander Americans in the House, and 2 in the Senate.

American Indian Members

There are five American Indian (Native American) or Native Hawaiian Members of the 117th Congress: three Republicans and two Democrats, all in the House.[32] This is .9% of the total congressional membership, and a record number.

Foreign Birth

Twenty-nine Representatives and five Senators (6.3% of the 117th Congress) were born outside the United States. Their places of birth include Canada, Cuba, Germany, Guatemala, Japan, Peru, and India. Some of these Members were born to American citizens working or serving abroad.[33] The U.S. Constitution requires that Representatives be citizens for seven years and Senators be citizens for nine years before they take office.[34]

Military Service

At the beginning of the 117th Congress, there were 91 individuals (16.8% of the total membership) who had served or were serving in the military, 5 fewer than at the beginning of the 116th Congress (96 Members). According to lists compiled by CQ, the House as of January 2021 had 75 veterans (including 4 female Members, as well as 1 Delegate); the Senate had 16 veterans, including 2 women.[35] These Members' service included tours of duty in the Vietnam War and the Persian Gulf War, and combat or peacekeeping missions in Afghanistan, Iraq, and Kosovo. Six website at http://history.house.gov/apa/. Due to differences in data collection or characterization, demographic data in other studies on Members of Congress may differ from those presented in this report.

[32] The 117th Congress began with six Native American or Native Hawaiian Members. One Native American House Member resigned in March 2021 to become Secretary of the Interior. One Native Hawaiian Member is also of Asian ancestry and is counted in both ethnic categories in this report.

This number includes only Members who are enrolled members of federally recognized tribes. For more information, see CRS congressional distribution memorandum, Members of Congress of American Indian Descent, by Jennifer Manning, available to congressional offices upon request.

[33] For more information, see Pew Research Center, "Immigrants and Children of Immigrants make up at least 14% of the 117th Congress," February 12, 2021, at https://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2021/02/12/immigrants-and-children-of-immigrants-make-up-at-least-14-of-the-117th-congress/; Office of the Senate Historian's Senators Born Outside the United States list at https://www.senate.gov/senators/Foreign_born.htm; and the Library of the House of Representatives' Foreign Born list at https://clerk.house.gov/documents/Foreign-Born.pdf.

[34] Article I, Section 2, clause 2, and Article I, Section 3, clause 3 of the U.S. Constitution.

[35] CQ, "117th Congress: House Military Veterans," at https://plus.cq.com/members/factfile/house-veterans; and "117th Congress: Senate Military Veterans," at https://plus.cq.com/members/factfile/senate-veterans. Both lists are frequently updated to reflect changes since the 117th Congress convened.

House Members and one Senator are still serving in the reserves, and seven House Members are still serving in the National Guard. Two of the six female veterans are combat veterans.

The number of veterans in the 117th Congress reflects the trend of steady decline in recent decades in the number of Members who have served in the military. For example, 64% of the Members of the 97th Congress (1981-1982) were veterans, and in the 92nd Congress (1971-1972), 73% of the Members were veterans. According to the Military Times, the 117th Congress veterans numbers are at the "lowest since the start of World War II."[36]

For summary information on the demographics of Members in selected past Congresses, including age trends, occupational backgrounds, military veteran status, and educational attainment, see CRS Report R42365, Representatives and Senators: Trends in Member Characteristics Since 1945, coordinated by R. Eric Petersen.[37]

Author Information

Jennifer E. Manning
Senior Research Librarian

[36] For more information and a list of current veteran Members, see the Military Times, "Veterans in the 117th Congress, by the numbers," December 28, 2020, at https://www.militarytimes.com/news/pentagon-congress/2020/12/28/veterans-in-the-117th-congress-by-the-numbers.

[37] Because of differences in data sources used, some demographic information may differ between CRS Report R42365, Representatives and Senators: Trends in Member Characteristics Since 1945, coordinated by R. Eric Petersen, this report, and other demographic studies of Congress.

In addition to the CQ Member Profiles, other sources of demographic information for the 117th Congress include Vital Statistics on Congress at https://www.brookings.edu/multi-chapter-report/vital-statistics-on-congress/, a joint project of the American Enterprise Institute and the Brookings Institution; and the Library of the House of Representatives' "Member Demographics" web page at https://clerk.house.gov/Members#Demographics, which features lists of House Members such as "117th Congress—Lawyers" and "117th Congress—Former Mayors." The Secretary of the Senate also maintains a collection of lists about Senators at https://www.senate.gov/reference/Senators.htm.

For summary information, see Pew Research Center Fact Tank's "Racial, ethnic diversity increases yet again with the 117th Congress," at https://www.pewresearch.org/fact-tank/2021/01/28/racial-ethnic-diversity-increases-yet-again-with-the-117th-congress/.

Disclaimer

This document was prepared by the Congressional Research Service (CRS). CRS serves as nonpartisan shared staff to congressional committees and Members of Congress. It operates solely at the behest of and under the direction of Congress. Information in a CRS Report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to Members of Congress in connection with CRS's institutional role. CRS Reports, as a work of the United States Government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS Report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS Report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain the permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.

Learn how Capitol Hill really works

All of our programs and any combination of their topics can be tailored for custom training for your organization.

For more than 40 years, TheCapitol.Net and its predecessor, Congressional Quarterly Executive Conferences, have been teaching professionals from government, military, business, and NGOs about the dynamics and operations of the legislative and executive branches and how to work with them.

Our training, on-site and online, and publications include congressional operations, legislative and budget process, communication and advocacy, media and public relations, research, testifying before Congress, legislative drafting, critical thinking and writing, and more.

- Diverse Client Base—We have tailored hundreds of custom on-site and online training programs for Congress, numerous agencies in all federal departments, the military, law firms, lobbying firms, unions, think tanks and NGOs, foreign delegations, associations and corporations, delivering exceptional insight into how Washington works.™
- Experienced Program Design and Delivery—We have designed and delivered hundreds of custom programs covering congressional/legislative operations, budget process, media training, writing skills, legislative drafting, advocacy, research, testifying before Congress, grassroots, and more.
- Professional Materials—We provide training materials and publications that show how Washington works. Our publications are designed both as course materials and as invaluable reference tools.
- Large Team of Experienced Faculty—More than 150 faculty members provide independent subject matter expertise. Each program is designed using the best faculty member for each session.
- Non-Partisan—TheCapitol.Net is non-partisan.
- GSA Schedule—TheCapitol.Net is on the GSA Schedule for custom training: GSA Contract GS02F0192X.

Please see our Capability Statement on our web site at TCNCS.com.

Custom training programs are designed to meet your educational and training goals, each led by independent subject-matter experts best qualified to help you reach your educational objectives and align with your audience.

As part of your custom program, we can also provide online venue, classroom space, breaks and meals, receptions, tours, and online registration and individual attendee billing services.

For more information about custom on-site training for your organization, please see our web site: TCNCustom.com or call us: 202-678-1600, ext 115.

TheCapitol.Net

Non-partisan training and publications that show how Washington works.™

PO Box 25706, Alexandria, VA 22313-5706
202-678-1600 • www.thecapitol.net

GSA Contract GS02F0192X Advantage!®

TheCapitol.Net is on the GSA Schedule for custom training. GSA Contract GS02F0192X