

Electing the Speaker of the House of Representatives: Frequently Asked Questions

Updated May 31, 2023

Congressional Research Service

<https://crsreports.congress.gov>

R44243

The House of Representatives and Senate Explained

Congressional Procedure

A Practical Guide to the Legislative Process in the U.S. Congress

Richard A. Arenberg

Foreword by Alan S. Frumin

 TheCapitolNet

Summary

This report briefly poses and answers several “frequently asked questions” in relation to the floor proceedings used to elect a Speaker of the House. Current practice for electing a Speaker, either at the start of a Congress or in the event of a vacancy (e.g., death or resignation), is by roll call vote, during which Members state aloud the name of their preferred candidate. Members may vote for any individual. If no candidate receives a majority of votes cast, balloting continues; in subsequent ballots, Members may still vote for any individual.

For a more detailed treatment of these election procedures, as well as data on elections of the Speaker in each Congress since 1913, see CRS Report RL30857, Speakers of the House: Elections, 1913-2021, by Valerie Heitshusen. For a list of all Speakers of the House and their periods of service, as well as additional discussion of selection procedures, see CRS Report 97-780, The Speaker of the House: House Officer, Party Leader, and Representative.

Contents

Introduction	1
When Does an Election for Speaker Occur?	1
Who Presides over the Proceedings to Elect a New Speaker?	1
How Are the Party Nominees Selected?	2
Are Nominations Formally Made on the Floor?	2
In What Form Do Members Vote?	2
For Whom May a Member Vote?	2
How Many Votes Must a Candidate Receive to Be Elected Speaker?	3
What Happens If No Member Receives Sufficient Votes?	3

Contacts

Author Information.....	3
Acknowledgments	3

Introduction

This report briefly poses and answers several frequently asked questions in relation to the floor proceedings used to elect a Speaker of the House. For a more detailed treatment of these election procedures, as well as data on elections of the Speaker in each Congress since 1913, see CRS Report RL30857, Speakers of the House: Elections, 1913-2021, by Valerie Heitschusen. For a list of all Speakers of the House and their periods of service, as well as additional discussion of selection procedures, see CRS Report 97-780, The Speaker of the House: House Officer, Party Leader, and Representative.

When Does an Election for Speaker Occur?

Upon convening at the start of a new Congress, the House elects a Speaker by roll call vote.¹ If a Speaker dies, resigns, or is removed during a Congress, the House elects a new Speaker at that time.² In the most recent cases of an election held during the middle of a Congress, the practice has been to elect a new Speaker using the same process as at the start of a Congress.³

Who Presides over the Proceedings to Elect a New Speaker?

When a Speaker is selected at the start of a new Congress, the Clerk of the House presides; the Clerk may also preside over an election to replace a Speaker who had died during a Congress.⁴ A sitting Speaker could preside over the election of his or her successor.⁵ However, under clause

¹ This occurs before Members are sworn in. The use of the term Member in this report refers, in these cases, to a Member-elect.

² The House takes no action to accept the resignation of a Speaker; see Charles W. Johnson, John V. Sullivan, and Thomas J. Wickham Jr., House Practice: A Guide to the Rules, Precedents and Procedures of the House (Washington, DC: GPO, 2017), ch. 34, §2. On three occasions, a Speaker has resigned the position (most recently John Boehner in 2015). On four occasions (all in the 19th century), the Speaker resigned from the House. Five Speakers died while in office (most recently Sam Rayburn in 1962). No Speaker has been removed from the office; a vote on a resolution in 1910 declaring a vacancy in the Speaker's office failed, and the sitting Speaker, Joseph Cannon, remained in the position until the end of the Congress. It was during these 1910 proceedings that the House established the precedent that resolutions declaring the office of the Speaker vacant "constitute a matter of high constitutional privilege." A more detailed discussion of the 1910 proceedings can be found in William McKay and Charles W. Johnson, Parliament and Congress: Representation and Scrutiny in the Twenty-First Century (Oxford University Press, 2010), pp. 46-47. For a short period, due to a change in House Rule IX made in the 116th Congress (and retained in the 117th Congress), such a resolution constituted a question of privileges of the House only if offered at the direction of a party conference or caucus. See U.S. Congress, House, Constitution, Jefferson's Manual, and Rules of the House of Representatives, One Hundred Seventeenth Congress (hereinafter House Manual), H.Doc. 116-177, 116th Cong., 2nd sess., [compiled by] Jason A. Smith, Parliamentarian (Washington, DC: GPO, 2021), §28. At the start of the 118th Congress, pursuant to H.Res. 5, the House removed the Rule IX provision that conferred privilege on the motion only when offered at the direction of a party conference or caucus; any Member may now take such action (subject to certain notice requirements) through a resolution raising a question of privileges of the House. The process for scheduling floor consideration of such a resolution, as well as the process by which the House could debate and potentially vote on agreeing to it, are addressed in the section "Floor Actions on Questions of Privilege" in CRS Report 98-411, Questions of Privilege in the House, by James V. Saturno.

³ The House could choose to select a Speaker by another method. For example, William B. Bankhead was selected pursuant to adoption of H.Res. 543 (74th Congress) in 1936 after the death of Joseph W. Byrns; Sam Rayburn was elected pursuant to adoption of H.Res. 602 (76th Congress) in 1940 upon the death of William B. Bankhead. Each resolution was adopted by voice vote.

⁴ For instance, the House Clerk presided over the election to replace Rayburn in 1962.

⁵ Jim Wright had announced his resignation "on the election of my successor;" he presided over the election of his successor, Thomas Foley. John Boehner also announced his resignation "effective upon the election of my successor" and presided during the proceedings to elect Paul Ryan.

8(b)(3) of House Rule I (adopted in the 108th Congress), the Speaker must provide the Clerk a list of Members designated to act as Speaker pro tempore in the case of a vacancy in the office. It is possible that a Member on this list could preside over an election in the case of a vacancy during a Congress.⁶

How Are the Party Nominees Selected?

In current practice, each House party caucus selects, prior to the floor vote, a candidate whose name is placed in nomination immediately before the vote.⁷

Are Nominations Formally Made on the Floor?

Typically, the election commences with a Member from each party caucus placing in nomination the party's candidate for Speaker. Other names may also be placed in nomination on the floor.⁸

In What Form Do Members Vote?

Since 1839, the election has been by roll call vote, a quorum being present. Votes are cast viva voce, meaning that each voting Member states aloud the surname of the candidate whom he or she favors for Speaker.⁹ The presiding officer appoints several Members as tellers, who tally the votes.

For Whom May a Member Vote?

Members are not required to vote for one of the candidates nominated by each major party (or even for some other candidate formally nominated on the floor); they may vote for any individual.¹⁰ Although the U.S. Constitution does not require the Speaker to be a Member of the House, all Speakers have been Members. However, some individuals not serving in the House have received votes.¹¹

⁶ See Congressional Record, daily edition, vol. 169 (January 9, 2023), p. H74, for notification in the 118th Congress by the Speaker that such a list was provided to the Clerk, pursuant to the rule. These lists are not made public.

⁷ Each party has its own internal processes for selecting its nominee. See Rules of the House Republican Conference for the 118th Congress (specifically conference Rules 2(e), 3, and 4), available at <https://www.gop.gov/conference-rules-of-the-118th-congress/>; and Rules of the Democratic Caucus (specifically, caucus Rules 2 and 3), available at https://www.dems.gov/imo/media/doc/democratic_caucus_rules_118th.pdf.

⁸ Prior to 1945, when the two-party system was still subject to fluctuation and instability, sometimes the names of other Members were put in nomination and received votes. Starting in 1939, however, no floor nominations (other than one from each major party) were made until the initial 2015 election (114th Congress), when the names of three other majority House Members were placed in nomination.

⁹ Prior to 1839, Speakers were regularly elected by ballot. House Manual, §27.

¹⁰ Even throughout the period until 1945 when floor nominations were more commonly made for individuals other than the major party nominees, some Members received votes even without their names being placed in nomination. Notably, in 2001, one Member voted for the nominee of the other major party rather than for the nominee of his own party. It appears that such a vote had not previously occurred in over half a century.

¹¹ Individuals not serving in the House received votes in 1997, 2013, the two 2015 elections, 2019, 2021, and 2023.

How Many Votes Must a Candidate Receive to Be Elected Speaker?

The long-standing practice of the House is that electing a Speaker requires a numerical majority of the votes cast by Members “for a person by name.”¹² This does not mean that an individual must necessarily receive a majority (currently 218) of the full membership of the House.¹³ This is because some Members may choose not to vote and others may answer “present.”¹⁴

What Happens If No Member Receives Sufficient Votes?

If no candidate receives the requisite majority of votes cast, the roll call is repeated. No restrictions are imposed on who may receive votes in the subsequent ballots. (For instance, no candidate is eliminated based on receiving the fewest votes in the floor election, and a Member’s vote is not limited to individuals who received votes in previous ballots.¹⁵)

Author Information

Valerie Heitshusen
Specialist on Congress and the Legislative Process

Acknowledgments

Richard S. Beth and Christopher M. Davis provided helpful comments.

¹² The Clerk, remarks from the chair (and parliamentary inquiry immediately following), Congressional Record, vol. 143, January 7, 1997, p. 117. See also House Practice, ch. 34, §3, and House Manual, §27, for explanations that the “Speaker is elected by a majority of Members-elect voting by surname.”

¹³ In the period since the House first reached its current size of 435 Members (in 1913), seven Speakers have been elected with fewer than 218 votes.

¹⁴ Because a response of “present” is not a vote for a person by name, it is not counted in the total number of cast votes, of which a majority are required to elect a Speaker.

¹⁵ In the modern era marked by the rise and eventual predominance of the two established national parties, only in 1923 and 2023 did the House require multiple ballots to elect a Speaker. In the 1923 case (68th Congress), a Speaker was elected on the ninth ballot; in 2023 (118th Congress), a Speaker was elected on the 15th ballot.

Disclaimer

This document was prepared by the Congressional Research Service (CRS). CRS serves as nonpartisan shared staff to congressional committees and Members of Congress. It operates solely at the behest of and under the direction of Congress. Information in a CRS Report should not be relied upon for purposes other than public understanding of information that has been provided by CRS to Members of Congress in connection with CRS's institutional role. CRS Reports, as a work of the United States Government, are not subject to copyright protection in the United States. Any CRS Report may be reproduced and distributed in its entirety without permission from CRS. However, as a CRS Report may include copyrighted images or material from a third party, you may need to obtain the permission of the copyright holder if you wish to copy or otherwise use copyrighted material.

Learn how Capitol Hill really works

All of our programs and any combination of their topics can be tailored for custom training for your organization.

For more than 40 years, TheCapitol.Net and its predecessor, Congressional Quarterly Executive Conferences, have been teaching professionals from government, military, business, and NGOs about the dynamics and operations of the legislative and executive branches and how to work with them.

Our training, on-site and online, and publications include congressional operations, legislative and budget process, communication and advocacy, media and public relations, research, testifying before Congress, legislative drafting, critical thinking and writing, and more.

- Diverse Client Base—We have tailored hundreds of custom on-site and online training programs for Congress, numerous agencies in all federal departments, the military, law firms, lobbying firms, unions, think tanks and NGOs, foreign delegations, associations and corporations, delivering exceptional insight into how Washington works.™
- Experienced Program Design and Delivery—We have designed and delivered hundreds of custom programs covering congressional/legislative operations, budget process, media training, writing skills, legislative drafting, advocacy, research, testifying before Congress, grassroots, and more.
- Professional Materials—We provide training materials and publications that show how Washington works. Our publications are designed both as course materials and as invaluable reference tools.
- Large Team of Experienced Faculty—More than 150 faculty members provide independent subject matter expertise. Each program is designed using the best faculty member for each session.
- Non-Partisan—TheCapitol.Net is non-partisan.
- GSA Schedule—TheCapitol.Net is on the GSA Schedule for custom training: GSA Contract GS02F0192X.

Please see our Capability Statement on our web site at TCNCS.com.

Custom training programs are designed to meet your educational and training goals, each led by independent subject-matter experts best qualified to help you reach your educational objectives and align with your audience.

As part of your custom program, we can also provide online venue, classroom space, breaks and meals, receptions, tours, and online registration and individual attendee billing services.

For more information about custom on-site training for your organization, please see our web site: TCNCustom.com or call us: 202-678-1600, ext 115.

TheCapitol.Net

Non-partisan training and publications that show how Washington works.™

PO Box 25706, Alexandria, VA 22313-5706
202-678-1600 • www.thecapitol.net

TheCapitol.Net is on the GSA Schedule
for custom training.
GSA Contract GS02F0192X

